From the Angkor temples to the Mekong Delta

YEAR-ROUND DEPARTURES

From the heights of the Himalayas to the southern shores of the China Sea, the Mekong, wherever it flows, fascinates people and shapes their lives.

We invite you to sail down this great and generous river, from the remains of Angkor to the Tonlé river, then on to Phnom Penh and Hồ-Chi-Minh City, a city still strongly imbued with the French colonial presence.

This meditative journey will allow you to live to the rhythm of the Mekong and its tributaries on board a ship combining comfort and colonial charm.

History by country

CRUISES ALONG THE MEKONG RIVER

HỒ-CHI-MINH CITY

VIETNAM

HỒ-CHI-MINH CITY (formerly Saigon)

District 1 is the place to be if you want to travel back in time. The Reunification Palace, Notre Dame Cathedral, and Saigon Central Post Office are all splendid testimonies to what the French call “The Pearl of the Far East.”

Our ships dock in the heart of Ho-Chi-Minh City, the financial core of the country. The Chinese District, Cholon, where nearly half the population lives, is teeming with life and vibrant marketplaces. Yet, a quick step inside one of the grand temples brings a sudden sensation of peace and serenity.

SA DEC

Sa Dec, also known as the “little Venice of Asia” thanks to the countless number of canals located in the area, is a small and romantic provincial town based along the Mekong Delta.

The town of Sa Dec is a hidden gem that is rarely populated with tourists. This is surprising as there is much to see and do here, despite its relatively small size. Of course, those people who have made the journey here have usually done so due to it being the original setting of Marguerite Duras’ famous autobiographical novel “The Lover” (L’Amant)

Sa Dec isn’t only famous for its place in the annals of classic literature. The town is also famous for its flower village (in Colonial times, Sa Dec was known as Garden of Cochin-China), and it’s little surprise that one of the main careers in the town is flower growing. Situated on the banks of the Tien River, you have free access to the flower and bonsai gardens here, and you can also talk to the local farmers if you want to get an understanding of their day-to-day life in the town.

ONE OF THE ENTRANCE GATES TO THE BAYON, TEMPLES OF ANGKOR

CAMBODIA

THE TEMPLES OF ANGKOR

Twisted like sleeping serpents, the temples of Angkor are a source of national pride. The complex is huge, and history has deemed it to be the most impressive advanced city in the world during its time. This former epicenter of the powerful Khmer empire between 802 and 1431 has been listed as a UNESCO World Heritage Site. There are over 1,000 temples in the complex, including the prized Angkor Wat; the Bayon Temple, best known for its 216 smiling faces; the Elephant Terrace, a former viewing stand during public ceremonies; Ta Prohm, one of the most stunning and popular temples in the complex.

ANGKOR WAT

The Angkor Wat temple, which lends its name to the entire complex, is itself one of the largest religious sites ever built. Constructed between 1113 and 1150, it was originally a Hindu temple dedicated to Vishnu that was later converted into a Buddhist temple.

Angkor Wat is surrounded by a large moat that helps protect it and stabilize the foundation. The main entrance is lined with statues of guardian lions. The heart of the temple is the central tower, surrounded by four smaller towers and a series of walls. One of the reasons for the temple’s fame are the intricate bas-relief friezes integrated into its architecture. The site has sustained significant damage from overgrowth, earthquakes, and war, but remains an important source of national pride for the country and a focus of ongoing restoration efforts.

PHNOM PENH

Phnom Penh, the capital of Cambodia, is a buzzing, modern metropolis that remains entrenched in a certain colonial nostalgia. Its main sites include the sumptuous Royal Palace complex—the apex of Khmer art—and the National Museum, which houses magnificent collections in its Museum of Fine Arts.

The Central Market, a bright yellow Art Deco landmark, is packed with treasures and souvenirs and is surrounded by the hustle and bustle of a city on the perpetual go.

SIEM REAP

ANGKOR WAT

Vietnam

INFORMATION

POPULATION : approximately 99,5 million.

AREA: 127,890 sq. mi. (331 000 km²).

CAPITAL: Hanoi.

LANGUAGES: The official language is Vietnamese. Many dialects are spoken. English is popular among the educated and in tourist areas. Vietnamese has its own set of characters that have been historically influenced by a variety of Asian languages, especially Chinese. Since a large number of minority groups exist that speak a variety of languages and dialects, a number of sign languages have developed in the cities. When it was a colony, French used to be the principal language in education, administration, and commerce, and within a certain generation, it is still spoken. Nevertheless, English has taken the forefront in the hotels.

GOVERNMENT: One-party socialist state.

CLIMATE

Overall, Vietnam has a hot and humid climate from north to south, although there can be large variances according to altitudes. The "green season" is from May to September when temperatures vary from 27°C / 80°F to 35°C / 95°F and sometimes up to 40°C / 104°F. When traveling through the south, we recommend light clothes: T-shirts, cotton shirts, and lightweight, cotton pants. You'll want a sweater or two and a windbreaker when you're on the ship and for the extended trips between November and March. In the north, we recommend warmer clothes between December and March. It can become cold in Hanoi and on Halong Bay.

CURRENCY

The national currency is the Vietnamese dong. It comes in 1,000; 2,000; 10,000; 20,000; 50,000; 100,000, 200,000; and 500,000 bills. Coins are rare. If you wish to buy souvenirs, we recommend that you change about £20 or $20 into dongs on arrival (NB: they will not be accepted in Cambodia). Credit and debit cards are not widely accepted. Visa cards are usually accepted in the larger hotels and stores. A 4% tax is charged for any card purchases.

CUSTOMS

You can bring a maximum of 1.5 liters of alcohol and 400 cigarettes with you into the country. PLEASE NOTE: When entering the country with over $5000 in cash (or its foreign equivalent), you must declare this to the authorities. For accurate, up-to-date information on customs regulations, please visit <https://www.vietnam-online.com/visa/customs-regulations> or contact your local Vietnamese embassy.

CUISINE

Food in Vietnam is fine, light, spicy, and varied. Southern foods tend to be sweeter than in the north, with coconut milk added when cooking. The central areas of the country use an enormous amount of seafood. The Vietnamese eat with chopsticks. There are three types of rice: normal, sticky, and aromatic. Rice is served as a side or main dish (with ginger, mushrooms, etc.). As in most Asian cultures, it is a staple that has contributed to the country's existence. A well-known proverb states: The educated man precedes the farmer. But when the rice begins to run short, it's the farmer who comes first. For additional flavor to their cooking, fish sauce is found on almost every table. The country seems to overflow with fish and shellfish. Chicken, duck, squab, pork, and buffalo are the main selection of meats. Beef and lamb are rare. One of the most basic meals is pho, a delicious soup of broth, noodles, herbs, and meat. During your tasting adventures, please only drink bottled water that you open yourself. Tap water, even in the cities, is not drinkable. Tea is the national drink and is often free or very cheap in restaurants. The most popular is green tea served in porcelain cups. Vietnamese coffee is very strong. Beer is the most popular alcoholic drink, with Saigon, Tiger, and 333 as the most well-known brands.

POPULATION

The Viet ethnic group makes up over 85% of the country's current population. They have significant political and economic influence over the country and live mainly in the coastal plains or large cities. Vietnam is also home to many other ethnic minorities, who tend to dwell in the highlands. Hanoi is the administrative capital, but Ho-Chi-Minh City is the real economic and commercial hub. In the former Annam region, Hue has been the country's intellectual and artistic center since the Nguyen Dynasty.

PURCHASES

Ho-Chi-Minh-City has a magnificent choice of painting, sculptures, pottery, stamps, and traditional crafts. Embroidered goods and antiques can be found mostly in Hanoi. Pay particular attention to fraud when shopping for antiques, and be aware that it is illegal to export real antiques from Vietnam without a permit. Permits can be obtained in Ho-Chi-Minh City at the Customs Office. For more information, consult the official website of the Ministry of Industry and Trade of Vietnam. Also check with your country's customs regulations when bringing gifts and items back home. Like most countries, and especially in larger cities, pickpockets can be rampant.

Cambodia

INFORMATION

OFFICIAL NAME: Kingdom of Cambodia.

AREA: 69,898 sq. mi. (181,035 km²).

CAPITAL: Phnom Penh.

POPULATION: Approximately 17 million. Over 95% of the population are ethnic Khmers, who speak the official language. Minority groups include Chams, Vietnamese, and Chinese (each under 2%).

GOVERNMENT: Elective constitutional monarchy.

KING: Norodom Sihamoni.

LANGUAGES: Khmer is the official language. The Khmer script is used to write the language. Street signs are now in Khmer and English.

CLIMATE

Cambodia is located in a tropical zone and benefits from exceptional sunlight all year round. The average temperature is about 27°C / 80°F with the lowest temperature at 17°C / 62°F. There are two seasons: the green season and the dry season. The green season is from May to October. Intense, brief storms tend to occur at the end of the afternoons, but never last long. The temperatures vary from 27°C / 80°F to 35°C / 95°F and sometimes up to 40°C / 104°F. The dry season is from October to April.

CURRENCY

Although the official currency is the Cambodian riel, US dollars in good condition are accepted almost everywhere. Be careful though, because dirty or ripped bills are often refused. Carry small denominations with you ($1, $5, $10 and/or $20 bills). Please note that most of the Cambodian businesses do not accept US dollars issued before the year 2000. Make sure to mention this to your personal banker when ordering the change (the issuing date is written on each banknote). Credit and debit cards are not widely accepted, except in international hotels and souvenir shops. Traveler's Checks are hard to cash.

CUSTOMS

You can bring up to two liters of wine, 400 cigarettes, and 350 ml of perfume with you into the country. You can bring up to $10,000 with you in cash without declaring it on arrival. Check with your country's customs regulations when bringing gifts and items back home.

CUISINE

Rice and fish are used in most of the traditional dishes. Meals are usually composed of soups, sautéed vegetables, and grilled meats. Dishes are usually enhanced with curry, lemongrass, mint and flavorful herbs, and world-famous Kampot pepper. Coconut milk is used abundantly, as is prahok, a salted and fermented fish paste. Chinese and Vietnamese cooking is also available in Cambodia.

POPULATION

The largest population in Cambodia is the Khmer, who are indigenous to the lowland regions. The minority populations include the Khmer Loeu, Chinese, and Vietnamese. Although the Khmer people originated in Cambodia, there are now significant populations in Thailand and Vietnam. The Khmer were part of the Indianized Kingdoms and benefited immensely from the economic and cultural diversity found along the East Asian maritime trade route. Historically, the Khmers live primarily as rice growers. The Chinese- Cambodians constitute a majority of the commercial middle class. They also have a strong presence in Cambodia's political scene. The Cham communities in Cambodia are largely Muslim, and most earn their livelihood from fishing. They are the descendants of the Kingdom of Champa. The Khmer Loeu is the collective name for various ethnic groups residing in the highlands of the country. They live in scattered villages with only a few hundred inhabitants each. The villages are usually governed by elders or a village head. They cultivate a wild variety of plants, but the main crop is rice. The Vietnamese community is traditionally involved in fishing. They are located along the banks of the Mekong and Tonle Sap lake. In cities, the Vietnamese are mostly craftspeople.

PURCHASES

Common souvenirs include gemstones (be very careful about fakes!), gold jewelry, silver and bronze objects, handmade silk fabrics, and local crafts (baskets, wooden and stone sculptures). Haggling prices is expected. Be very careful about buying counterfeit items (clothes, shoes, perfumes), since your country's customs regulations might prohibit their entry on your return.
